The Honorable William H. Webster
Director
Central Intelligence Agency
Washington, DC 20505

Dear Bill:

For over fifty years, The Junior Statesmen of America program has helped train outstanding high school students for responsible leadership in public affairs. Founded on the West Coast, the program is well on its way to being well-established and widely respected nationwide. I know many men and women who are important civic leaders largely as a result of their Junior Statesmen experience in high school.

From July 17 through August 7, the 48th annual session of The Junior Statesman Summer School will be conducted at Georgetown University. Two hundred outstanding high school students from throughout the United States have been selected to participate in this nonpartisan educational program.

The Summer School curriculum includes a rigorous academic introduction to American government and nightly student debates on national public policy issues. In addition, Summer School students will have the opportunity to meet and question national leaders from the three branches of government.

In previous years, you were kind enough to give Junior Statesmen Summer School students an informative look into the operations of government. Thank you for participating in the past. I hope you will agree to meet this summer with a new group of young Statesmen.

The Summer School Staff will be in touch with you and your staff to invite your participation. For your information, a copy of the Summer School announcement is enclosed.

Through many years of personal involvement with the Junior Statesmen program, I have found it to be educationally unique and very worthwhile. I hope that your schedule will allow time to meet with these young scholars.

Sincerely,

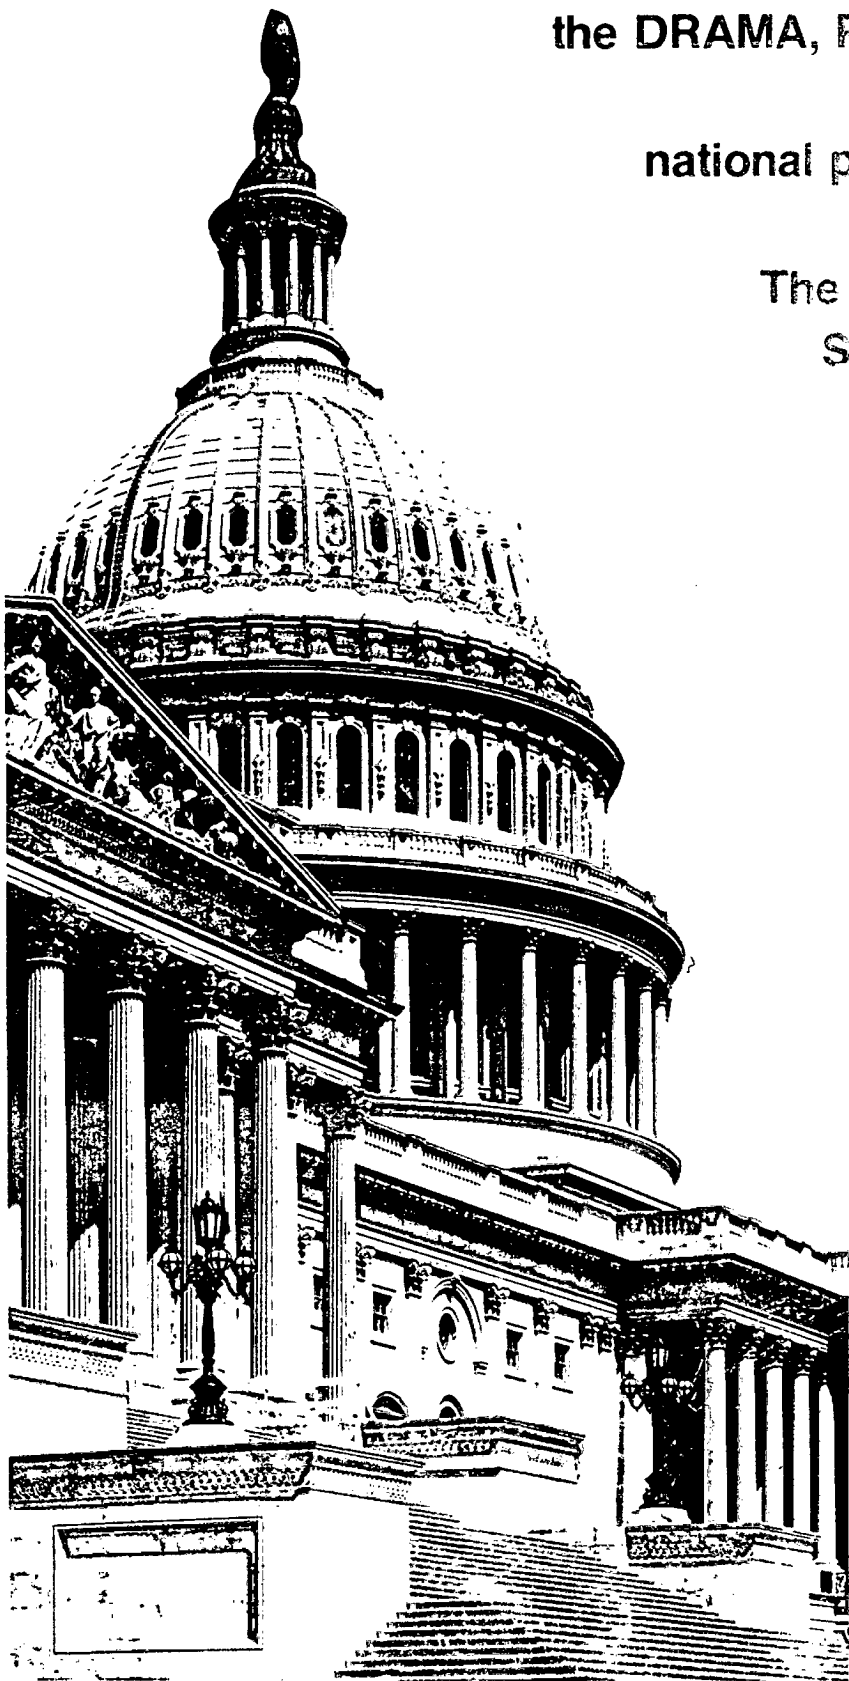

Edwin Meese III
